

I am a 4th grade Interior Architecture and Environmental Design student at Yaşar University. I had a chance to study in Slovenia on my 4th semester and do my internship in Italy. This experience totally changed my lifestyle and design approach. It was an extraordinary and improving experience. Living abroad has its own difficulties and advantages. First of all, studying in a different studio and being a part of an international team is a priceless opportunity. Living with people from different cultures would be a compelling experience for some, but it was an enjoyable part for me. Because this difference gives people a chance to discover new things every day, these discoveries are constantly improving and changing people. Furthermore, one of the most valuable parts of the Erasmus Exchange Program is the chance to travel in Europe! I found a change to visit many important museums, exhibitions and biennials in many countries. Erasmus Program develops people culturally, academically and sometimes it forces them to change in addition to look through a different perspective.

I always wanted to go somewhere and explore the world. So, “to be an exchange student with Erasmus program” was on my to do list. But, I strongly advise to be a part of this program to those who are afraid of doing it or unstable.
